

Tavistock Farmhouse

The owners of this farmhouse at Tavistock in Devon were over the moon with their new driveway installation of LeesonBound PU4844. They had instructed the contractor to match existing stone on the site and to blend with the colour of the house. The contracting company delivered with a precise match to their client's request and installed it to an extremely high-quality standard. They ensured the base was sound with a layer of compacted stone, followed by open texture tarmac levelled and compacted, then topped with the decorative LeesonBound resin and aggregate to finish. The self-draining properties of LeesonBound were of significant importance to the customer, as was the anti-slip finish. The appeal of a resin bound driveway is that it can be combined with any blend of aggregate according to the client's preference.
